well, I am a very punctual person. I love to finish my work on time. Most of the time, I finish my work before the deadline, sometimes I am unable to do so due to certain circumstances. Here I would like to talk about a time when I had to finish a school project quickly. It happened last year during my final semester. I had to create a presentation on a complex topic and present it to the class.

To finish it quickly, I broke down the tasks into smaller parts and set specific deadlines for each. I focused on gathering relevant information, creating visual aids, and practicing my presentation skills even it was not an easy job for me. I worked diligently even putting in extra hours to meet the deadline.

I had to finish it promptly because the presentation was significant part of my final grade. I wanted to ensure that I had enough time to prepare and deliver it efficiently. It was a bitter sweet moment for me I felt mix of pressure and determination on the one hand, I was stressed about the time constraint and the importance of the project. But on the other hand I felt motivated to challenge
