- And explain how you felt

well, being a Benevolent ^(Kind hearted) person I always ready to lend a helping hand to everyone as it gives me inner gratification and sense of happiness (contentment). Here I would like to talk about an occasion when I helped family members. He is none other ^{than} my father. Actually, my father runs a grocery store which is situated just around the corner of our town. He earns bread and butter for family.

Being a school going student, I have hectic schedule, so I don't get time to lend my hands to him in household and shop chores. However, I vividly remember, during my summer vacation, I put my best foot forward to assist him in his work. I went to shop daily around 10am and spend my noon there. As, I didn't know much about all the grocery items

So, I often took orders from customers and passed it to my father.

Apart from this, I used to make expenses and sales lists daily. It seemed quite fascinating to me I am quite whiz at Maths.

These lists proved fruitful for my father in order to calculate the monthly profit.

My father was so elated because it was the first time I was taking interest in his small business. Even, I felt gratified as well. I not solely learn the customer service, but also learn to operate the small business.

Besides this, I used to commute home daily in the evening to bring some launch and tea for my father. This small effort saved my father's time.
